In a configuration with redundant supervisors, how many IP addresses are required to configure full remote access via management 0?

- A. Two IP addresses, one for each supervisor
- B. Three IP addresses, one virtual IP and one physical IP for each supervisor
- C. One IP address that is shared among supervisors
- D. None-management 0 will use the IP address from the first SVI that is created

Answer: C

Explanation:

Fully redundant switch contains two supervisor modules. If these modules are Supervisor 1 modules, they each have a CMP. Although only one supervisor module is active at any one time, the CMP software in each supervisor module is always active. For a high-availability configuration, you should connect four Ethernet cables to these supervisor modules—one for each 9ther 0 interface and one for each cmp-mgmt interface. You should also configure three IP addresses—one for each cmp-mgmt interface and one that is shared between the active and standby supervisor 9ther 0 interfaces. Reference:
