NEW QUESTION: 1

You have created a virtual cloud network (VCN) with three private subnets. Two of the subnets contain application servers and the third subnet contains a DB System. The application requires a shared file system so you have provisioned one using the file storage service (FSS). You also created the corresponding mount target in one of the application subnets. The VCN security lists are properly configured so that both application servers and the DB System can access the file system. The security team determines that the DB System should have read-only access to the file system.

What change would you make to satisfy this requirement?

- A. Create an NFS export option that allows READ_ONLY access where the source is the CIDR range of the DB System subnet.
- B. Modify the security list associated with the subnet where the mount target resides. Change the ingress rules corresponding to the DB System subnet to be stateless.
- C. Create an instance principal for the DB System. Write an Identity and Access Management (IAM) policy that allows the instance principal read-only access to the file storage service.
- D. Connect via SSH to one of the application servers where the file system has been mounted. Use the Unix command `chmod` to change permissions on the file system directory, allowing the database user read only access.

Answer: A

Explanation:

Explanation

NFS export options enable you to create more granular access control than is possible using just security list rules to limit VCN access. You can use NFS export options to specify access levels for IP addresses or CIDR blocks connecting to file systems through exports in a mount target.

NEW QUESTION: 2

You are creating service profiles for a Cisco UCS system by using the service profile wizard. You discover that you forgot to create the UUID pool.

What should you do?

- A. Pause the running wizard, and then start a temporary wizard to create a profile with the same name and the missing UUID pool. Resume the wizard, and then select the new UUID pool.
- B. From the wizard, click Create UUID Suffix Pool.
- C. Stop the wizard, and then restart the wizard.
- D. Continue running the wizard. The service profile uses the burned-in UUID in the BIOS of the server.

Answer: B
