NEW QUESTION: 3
Which of the following is used to create and delete views and relations within tables?
A. SQL Data Manipulation Language
B. SQL Data Relational Language
C. SQL Data Identification Language
D. SQL Data Definition Language
Answer: D
Explanation:
SQL supports the data definition language (DDL) for creating, altering, and deleting tables and indexes. SQL does not permit metadata object names to be represented by parameters in DDL statements. With this language you can create many of the objects used in SQL, this language is standard and is supported by most database vendors in its standard form. Many of them also extends its functionality for proprietary products.
