- A. StringReader
- B. StringBuilder
- C.DataContractSerializer
- D. JsonSerializer

Answer: A

Explanation:

Explanation

There are many ways to separate a string into lines. With `StringReader`, we read lines from a string individually in the order they appear. This type enables us to access string data through a stream-oriented interface.

NEW QUESTION: 2

When you register an activity in Amazon SWF, you provide the following information, except:

- A. version
- B. a domain
- C. a name
- D. timeout values

Answer: B

Explanation:

When designing an Amazon SWF workflow, you precisely define each of the required activities.

You then register each activity with Amazon SWF as an activity type. When you register the activity, you provide information such as a name and version, and some timeout values based on how long you expect the activity to take.
