What are the possible characteristics of a client-server configuration in a current ERP system?

- I. Thin clients, local area network, single server
- II. Fat clients, wide area network, multiple servers
- III. Fat clients, connection via Internet, and single server

- A. I, II, and III.
- B. II and III only.
- C. II only.
- D. I only.

Answer: A

Explanation:

Current ERP systems have a client-server configuration with possibly scores or hundreds of client user) computers. Clients may be thin or fat. So-called thin clients have little processing ability, but fat clients may have substantial processing power. The system may have multiple servers to run applications and contain databases. The network architecture may be in the form of a local area network (LAN) or wide area network (WAN), or users may connect with the server(s) via the Internet. An ERP system may use almost any of the available operating systems and database management systems.
