NEW QUESTION: 3
A shared resource matrix is a technique commonly used to locate:
A. Security flaws
B. Covert channels
C. Trap doors
D. Malicious code
Answer: B
Explanation:
Explanation/Reference:
Explanation:
A covert channel is a way for an entity to receive information in an unauthorized manner. It is an information flow that is not controlled by a security mechanism.
The channel to transfer this unauthorized data is the result of one of the following conditions:
Improper oversight in the development of the product

Improper implementation of access controls within the software

Existence of a shared resource between the two entities which are not properly controlled

By using a shared resource matrix a covert channel can be located.
Incorrect Answers:
A: A shared resource matrix is not used to locate malicious code. Malicious code, such as viruses or Trojan horses, is used to infect a computer to make it available for takeover and remote control.

B: A shared resource matrix is not used to locate the security flaw of covert channels, but not to locate security flaws in general.
C: You do not use a shared resource matrix to locate a trapdoor. A backdoor (or trapdoor) in a computer system (or cryptosystem or algorithm) is a method of bypassing normal authentication, securing unauthorized remote access to a computer, or obtaining access to plaintext while attempting to remain undetected. The backdoor may take the form of a hidden part of a program; a separate program (e.g., Back Orifice) may subvert the system through a rootkit.
