NEW QUESTION: 2

Which three statements are true about Oracle Enterprise Manager Topology Viewer?

- A. It displays which listeners listen on behalf of which instances.
- B. It displays the type of network used by RAC database instance.
- C. It displays the relationship between targets of different target types in a cluster.
- D. It displays the relationship between clustered ASM and cluster databases if the database is stored in ASM.
- E. It displays the status of Pluggable Databases (PDBs) in a multitenant container database (CDB).
- F. It displays the status of all cluster components.

Answer: A, C, D

Explanation:
Using the topology view you can quickly see the components that comprise your cluster database environment, such as database instances, listeners, Oracle ASM instances, hosts, and interfaces.

Note: Enterprise Manager provides a Topology Viewer which is a graphical representation of routing relationships across targets, components and elements. You can easily determine how requests are routed across components. For example, you can see how requests are routed from Oracle Web Cache, to Oracle HTTP Server, to a Managed Server, to a data source.

The Topology Viewer allows you to view the relationships between components, nodes, or objects within different Oracle applications.
