NEW QUESTION: 4

You administer a Microsoft SQL Server 2012 server that hosts a transactional database and a reporting database. The transactional database is updated through a web application and is operational throughout the day. The reporting database is only updated from the transactional database. The recovery model and backup schedule are configured as shown in the following table: One of the hard disk drives that stores the reporting database fails at 16:40 hours.

You need to ensure that the reporting database is restored. You also need to ensure that data loss is minimal.

What should you do?

- A. Restore the latest full backup.
- B. Perform a partial restore.
- C. Perform a point-in-time restore.
- D. Restore the latest full backup. Then, restore each differential backup taken before the time of failure from the most recent full backup.
- E. Restore the latest full backup, and restore the latest differential backup. Then, restore the latest log backup.
- F. Perform a page restore.
- G. Restore the latest full backup, and restore the latest differential backup. Then, restore each log backup taken before the time of failure from the most recent differential backup.
- H. Restore the latest full backup. Then, restore the latest differential backup.

Answer: A

Explanation:

Original answer is H... but I don't particularly like any... restore full on reporting and run update again or use transactional full and 2 O'clock differential from Transaction db to restore the reporting dB. I'm going for something missing from question or answer
