- A. A secondary index is a type of index that is used to query data in a table. It is created on a non-key attribute and is used to query data based on the value of that attribute. A secondary index is not a primary key and does not have a unique constraint.
- B. A global secondary index is a type of secondary index that is used to query data in a table. It is created on a non-key attribute and is used to query data based on the value of that attribute. A global secondary index is a global index that spans all instances of the table and is used to query data based on the value of that attribute.
- C. A local secondary index is a type of secondary index that is used to query data in a table. It is created on a non-key attribute and is used to query data based on the value of that attribute. A local secondary index is a local index that is only used to query data in the instance that it is created on.

Local secondary indexes

D. Local secondary indexes are supported on tables with a hash primary key.

Answer: C

Explanation:

Explanation

When you create a table with a hash-and-range key, you can optionally define one or more secondary indexes on that table. A secondary index lets you query the data in the table using an alternate key, in addition to queries against the primary key. <http://docs.aws.amazon.com/amazondynamodb/latest/developerguide/DataModel.html>
